DAMAGE, BUT NO THEFT, IN BREAK AT MURPHY'S REAL ESTATE

A thief who broke into the real estate office of Marion Murphy, South Main Street, last Thursday evening, caused plenty of damage, but found no money to steal.

The thief broke a window to gain entrance, and destroyed a considerable part of the office equipment in ransacking the office.

TED KENNEDY TO SPEAK AT ST DOROTHY'S HOLY NAME

Ted Kennedy, Assistant District Attorney for Suffolk County, and brother of the President, is to be the speaker at a meeting of St. Dorothy's Holy Name Society, next Sunday.

The Holy Name will meet after the 9 am Mass. Anyone interested is welcome to attend. Admission is free.

TURN ON THE LIGHTS

OPERATION WASHINGTON WILL START FRIDAY NIGHT

With several hundred dollars already contributed by Wilmington merchants and others, the real work of collecting money for the Operation Washington D.C. plan to send Wilmington's undefeated football team for a post-Christmas holiday in Washington will start Friday night.

Youngsters from Wilmington High School will call at every home in Wilmington, bearing sealed cartons, in which home owners may deposit their contributions.

Turn On The Lights
Chairman Anthony De Luca has asked that home-owners wishing to contribute turn on their porch lights, so as to enable the youngster to approach the home with more safety, and to recognize those homes which will make contributions.

The youngsters will start the collections at 6:30 pm and hope to be completed by 8:30pm after which they will report to the High School, where the containers will be opened.

Twenty five drivers have volunteered to take the youngsters in their cars, for the evening.

A minimum contribution of $1 is being asked, with larger contributions being, of course welcome.

Wilmington merchants have been asked by mail (450 letters) to make contributions to the Operation Washington D.C. Fund.

HOW TO HOLD GOOD TEACHERS

There was a time in Wilmington, back about 1930, when it was the proud boast of the School Committee that it cost less per year to educate a child in this town than in almost any town in the Commonwealth.

Our school committee was economy minded, which as an attribute no one will object about, but, actually it was penny wise and pound foolish.

It had a deliberate policy of getting girls who had just graduated from college or normal schools, letting them learn how to teach in Wilmington, and then letting them go to other towns where a better salary scale was offered.

In this way Wilmington lost many good teachers, who, as a matter of fact, learned at the expense sometimes of the school children, and at the same time saved a few pennies.

That day, happily (in an educational sense) is over. Our School Committee, as shown by the present budget, is conscious of the value of a person who has had experience in his profession and our pupils will not lose the experience one can get, from professionally trained personnel.

It would seem that this is not the policy in the Town Hall.

Just what happened when the Board of Health requested an arrangement whereby Mr. Thibeau could be assured of an increase in pay, is not known for a certainty. The Selectmen say they have only had a few executive sessions of five minutes each, but there was no discussion of the problem in public, and we can only conclude that there was no discussion at all, although this is, of course rather preposterous.

Mr. Thibeau did not want an immediate increase in pay, the way we understand it. He wanted an assurance that he would be given an increase next year, over his present level, which is equated with people who are not possessors of Master's degrees.

He merely wanted an assurance.

Mr Brooks, at the Baldwin Meeting Tuesday night, stated that the town's loss is the gain of the United States Public Health Service. He was right.

But we are afraid that we will be unable to get another Sanitarian, without going to the price that Mr. Thibeau was hoping to get in the town he has come to know so well, and has served so well.

the Baldwin meeting Tuesday night, involving Mr Thibeau, was his part in the "saving" of an industry for Wilmington.

We have vaguely referred to this in the past It is the industry that our TM let it be known he had "saved" for Wilmington.

The particular industry of which we speak was going to "pull out in fifteen minutes" according to its spokesman, if the town didn't back down on its requirement of plans for the sewage system.

The way the TM "saved" the industry was to take Mr. Thibeau and the engineer to lunch, and at that lunch Thibeau agreed to wait a few weeks for the plan, because he too hated to see the town lose tax dollars.

In doing this Thibeau made a definite concession, because all buildings, homes or industrial, must have their sewage plans approved in Wilmington, before construction can start.

Mr Thibeau realized he wasn't being exactly fair to others who he had made toe the mark, but, as we say, he agreed to wait for a few weeks, and the TM rushed into print to tell the world how he had "saved" the industry.

Six months later, give or take a few weeks, with the building nearing completion, the Board of Health had to send a Registered Letter, demanding that the plans be sent in for approval.

AWARDS TO BE PRESENTED FRIDAY BY BALDWIN CIVIC

250 guests are expected to be present at the Avco cafeteria on Lowell Street, Friday evening, when the Baldwin Civic Association will present Civic Progress awards to Town Counsel Philip Buzzell, former Health Nurse Esther Nichols, and to Mrs. Howard Woolaver, daughter of the late Herbert C. Barrows, representing her father.

The dinner, scheduled for 7:30 p.m., is to be the first of a series of annual dinners recognizing individuals in Wilmington for their efforts in civic progress.

Mr. Barrows, who died recently, served the town for 60 years as an official. He was chosen for the award before he died, and it is being given posthumously.

The principal speaker is to be Elliott Richardson, former US Attorney for Massachusetts.

APPOINTED TO NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

Ten High School Seniors and Juniors were honored, Tuesday, by being made members of the National Honor Society, because of their outstanding scholarship, character and leadership. One young lady, Charlene Sullivan, was not present for the picture. The others are:

Front: Marilyn Olson, Claudia Zaverzon, Lorraine Walley, Janice Mazza, Elizabeth Brisbois.

Rear: Peter Krey, Nancy Allen, Kevin McKelvey, Danny Gouvea and Dean Cail.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS ARE SCHOOL DENTAL ASSISTANTS

The Wilmington High School Guidance Department is offering high school girls an opportunity to assist in the Dental Clinic, where they may observe and assist in some of the phases of dentistry.

As receptionists the girls receive and dismiss the patients, set up the tray for the Dental Hygienist with proper instruments, and learn various methods of sterilizing instruments, dental procedures and dental office routine.

Mrs. Eleanor Hovey, Dental Hygienist, is in charge of the program, which enables the school department to save money and at the same time give the girls an opportunity to learn to be accurate, precise and orderly, and possible acquire an aptitude for a professional career.

In conversations since returning he has said that he felt New Haven Connecticut will receive an award. That city, he said, had a large scale model, showing the work that had been done in recent years, under Urban Renewal and under private enterprise, with new buildings in white relief. The contest, he was surprised to learn, was very seriously regarded in some of the cities. It was, for instance, the second time that Galveston Texas was in the contest, and that city was presenting exactly the same arguments which it presented a year ago. Brooks' presentation came last, as the cities were presented in alphabetical order, and he had to wait out the other presentations.

He was allowed, as were the others, 10 minutes, 9 in which to speak, and one in which to summarize his argument.

There were questions after the presentation from the panelists, and one point on which he was asked several questions was his statement that in Wilmington there is a separate committee, not the school committee, who build the public schools.

Brooks reported that there was a tone of incredulity in the questions regarding the school building program in Wilmington.

After returning to Wilmington he released a copy of his speech to several newspapers.

"Exactly eight years ago on a bleak, wind-tortured December day, I became a resident of Wilmington, Massachusetts.

It was not an auspicious introduction to the community, and I mention this because it qualifies me as an impartial observer to many of the dramatic changes worked in a decade of progress by the citizens of Wilmington, themselves.

"I say 'worked' because these changes did not just happen. They were conceived, planned and carried to execution by the residents of the town in a demonstration of citizen responsibility and resourcefulness experienced in few communities.

"The house which has become my home was constructed in 1720, ten years before the incorporation of the town. One of its most charming features was a huge and historic elm, planted more than 300 years ago to mark a grant of land from the king of England, known as "Land of Nod."

"After more than two and a quarter centuries, the house retains its classic, colonial lines, and its rugged stability. The tree was attacked by rot. Its trunk was patched with tons of cement. Finally heavy steel cables no longer could hold its massive boughs together. Reluctantly I recently had to have it cut down.

"In a way, the house and tree were symbolic of the community. The town, like the house, retained in essence its rugged colonial character; but like the tree, time was eating away at it. History, which Wilmington had helped to create, was passing it by.

In fact, the town was living so completely in the spirit of the "Land of Nod," it was asleep to the fact that its wooded lakeside had become a hideout for known criminals, among them a member of the infamous Brinks bandits; that it was infested by bootlegging, illegal liquor, after-hours joints, and professional gambling.

"Then in the past decade or so, Wilmington, like so many other small communities was struck by the post war flight from the city to suburbia. From the late 40s into the 1960s, the population nearly doubled twice, from 4645 to its present 13,000.

"The community was ill prepared for its sudden growth. The very richness of its increased numbers was enough to bankrupt it. But not for long! Thousands of eager new home owners became a civic blood transfusion for the old residents. Together, old residents and new found a new and driving stimulation toward enlightened citizenship. What was good enough for their ancestors and the centuries past was no longer sufficient for their children and the future.

"Wilmington faced its community problems and resorted to some drastic surgery, also. It got rid of the gamblers, the bars, the hideouts. It saw the necessity for improved police and fire protection, school and recreation facilities.

"Most of all, Wilmington's citizens recognized the need for modern government. That's where reform made its start. Citizen groups organized. They generated a momentum which a decade later has not yet run down.

"In 1949 the state legislature approved a change in Wilmington's charter. The following year, at the urging of the Baldwin Civic association and several other enthusiastic citizen groups, the voters of Wilmington adopted the town manager plan over unrelenting opposition.

"Yet, the citizens retained in their hands the final and ultimate authority for the appropriating and expenditure of all funds through the retention of the town meeting. Thus, Wilmington emerged with a December-May marriage of the oldest and newest forms of government in the United States. It has been a happy and productive union. Today more citizens than ever participate actively in government, even though they have turned the administration over to trained professionals.

"In addition to its full time administrative staff, Wilmington has approximately 125 employees, exclusive of the school system. They represent the paid clerical and labor force.

"But the more important task of policy making rests in an identical number of unpaid volunteer citizens. They make up the various boards and committees of the town, such as the board of selectmen, school committee, finance committee, planning board, board of appeals, board of health, board of water commissioners, board of public welfare, recreation commission, library trustees and personnel board.

"These participating citizens act only out of interest for the community at large. How active they have been, and how effective has been their action, may be determined from these additional accomplishments in the past decade—while maintaining a fairly stable tax rate.

"Since 1953 citizen committees have supervised construction of three new primary schools, an intermediate school, and two major high school additions, in what is a 10-school, 10-year, $10,000,000 program. In addition, citizen groups are now viewing additional school sites. The school authorities do not build these schools. The citizen volunteers do. When completed, the schools are turned over to the educators.

"Since 1952 Wilmington has boasted the most impressive record of industrial growth in Massachusetts. Job opportunities increased from 170 to over 3000. Industries increased from six to 20. Assessed industrial valuation counted from $100,000 to $6,250,000.

"In the first five months of 1961, the Massachusetts department of commerce reported 10 per cent of total industrial building in the commonwealth was within Wilmington. Five new selective industries have constructed in Wilmington this year. That many more have indicated intent to do so. This did not happen by accident, either. Some were attracted to Wilmington by residents acting on their own initiative.

"Paving the way for this industrial growth was the preparation, also by citizens, volunteers, with the aid of consultants, of exacting zoning regulations. Exercised by the planning and appeals boards and board of health, these regulations are the basic factors in the development, physically, of Wilmington as a balanced community in which its people may live and work.

Wilmington recently built a model community for its aged citizens and has taken an enlightened view towards its juveniles and their problems. The town is the skating center of the east. One of its skating club members is the United States and North American women's speed skating champion, Miss Jean Ashworth is now in Europe studying continental skating methods in preparation for the 1964 Olympics. Her fellow citizens helped to send her there. The young boys and girls of the town are so busy emulating her, they have little time or opportunity for delinquency.

Mr. LeBlanc will receive about $35 a week, for part-time work as a health officer, inspecting and investigating complaints.

He will be unable to perform some of the duties formerly done by Public Health Officer Patrick Thibeau, now on terminal leave from the Town of Wilmington.

Inspections of sewer systems, for instance, must with all new buildings, will have to urday, which means that there may be delays for the builders when only one or two inspections are ready for any particular weekend.

The Board of Health agreed that Mr. LeBlanc could be milk inspector, but felt that they would have to make the inspections of restaurants in Wilmington.

Mr. LeBlanc, a Boston & Maine Railroad Conductor, has an evening run, on the railroad. He has been a resident of Wilmington for many years.

YOU HAVE TO WAIT UNTIL SATURDAY
The first thing LeBlanc had to do as Acting Agent was to tell builder George De Franco that he would have to wait until Saturday, to have an inspection of the sewer system in a home he is building.

ORGANIZATIONAL MEETING FOR SWAIN AND CENTER SCHOOL PARENTS NEXT MONDAY

An organizational meeting is to be held in the Wilmington High School cafeteria, Monday at 8 pm, for parents of children in the Swain and Center Schools interested in forming a parent's association.

The meeting has been arranged by a voluntary planning committee of parents, with the assistance and cooperation of Supervising Principal Anthony De Luca. The temporary chairman is Dick Keane of North St.

The meeting will elect permanent officers, determine the name of the organization, and conduct other preliminary business.

Harold Shea, Superintendent of Schools, will be one of the speakers.

One of the objectives of this parent's association will be to develop and promote a deeper and more widespread understanding of the purposes, achievements, problems and needs of the public schools.

BROOKS HOPEFUL

Wilmington, unlike most communities, in the Metropolitan Boston area, has its own water system; and has inaugurated and is about to extend sewerage. These twin multi-million dollar programs were fostered, not merely by the administration of the town, but by far-seeing citizen advisors. For example, the town recently opened a new well-field productive of 1,500,000 gallons per day. When the proposal was first presented demonstrates the power and force of citizen participation. A committee made a point of calling on citizen organizations in the community explaining the advantages of unlimited water for home and industrial use, especially when one industry, Aveo Research and Advanced Development, utilizes 500,000 gallons daily. The result was inevitable. Complete understanding won complete approval.

"In the field of civilian defense, a 'Wilmington Plan' conceived by town residents

Miami Beach, Fla., Dec. 1 -- Dr. George H. Gallup (right), foreman of the All-America Cities Awards Jury and Director of the American Institute of Public Opinion, welcomes John Brooks, City Editor, Boston Record-American, and resident of Wilmington, Mass., who is here today to present the city's 'case' at the National Conference on Government, where the jury hearings are in session. The city is one of 22 finalists competing for the coveted awards presented annually under the sponsorship of the National Municipal League and LOOK Magazine. Winners will be announced early next year.

by the water commissioners, it was turned down at a town meeting.

A few months later it was accepted unanimously. What happened in between is being considered by the congress and Massachusetts legislature to give tax relief to home owners building fallout shelters in their dwellings.

"Recently at the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Association of Finance Committees, a state official declared: "If disaster were to wipe out the roster of paid officials and employees, most Massachusetts towns could survive, but if the community lost its citizen volunteers, town functions would be disorganized indefinitely."

"With 10 per cent of our residents participating, directly or indirectly in civic affairs, and a growing list of volunteers, awaiting appointment to committees, we in Wilmington understand why!"

"So much for the session at Miami, but let it be known that the foregoing statements are fact, not fiction. Now there is nothing to do but wait the approximate three weeks until all votes are in and the ultimate winners are announced. Though the decision for Wilmington be win, lose or draw, it is indeed a tribute to a town such as that that the community has been considered for such a national honor.

WILMINGTON'S HEALTH IS FORUM SUBJECT AT BALDWIN CLUB

CONFLICT OF INTEREST ALSO DISCUSSED

The relative position of Wilmington, in Public Health activities, is one of the highest in the northeastern part of Massachusetts, according to Herbert Nickerson, District Health Engineer for the State, and member of Wilmington's Planning Board.

Nickerson told the Baldwin Association that he had deliberately chosen Wilmington as a town in which to live, because of its excellent Public Health record. 'It was not just because of Pat Thibau, and the Board of Health', he said, but because of the other organized activities, the local boards, and the civic minded people.' He was very thankful for the high standards of the town.

Thibau

In one sense, unintentionally, the meeting was an accolade to Pat Thibau, Public Health Officer of Wilmington, now entering the US Public Health service.

The meeting was not so intended, but the hearty hand-clapping at the close of Thibau's last phrase, at the end of the evening, attested to the high regard he had from his listeners, as a public servant.

Thibau, in the beginning of the evening, described the Wilmington to which he came in 1953, when he was first employed by the Board of Health. The town had a Public Health Nurse, and other part time officials in public health, (and without disparaging the work of these people) Thibau described some of the public health problems of 1953.

The State Department of Commerce listed Wilmington as having 20% of its homes sub-standard, Thibau said, in not having such things as toilets and washing facilities. Food establishments, in a survey he made, complied only in about 25% of the regulations of the Public Health Service. There was no such thing as examinations of restaurants and milk, and some of the milk he analyzed, sold in Wilmington, had a very high bacterial count.

Thibau found one man milking cows, in Wilmington, in 1953, who was suffering from TB, the milk being sold raw, and locally. He found overflowing cesspools, wells next to cesspools 'and things like that'.

There were no biologicals and no public health laboratory, there was no 'follow through' on the state Statutory Obligations, a fact that sometimes cost the town considerable sums.

The statutory obligations, he explained, cost money because of help given in such cases as the birth of premature babies. In a recent case the town saved $1200, when it was shown that a premature baby case was to be devolved upon another town, where the parents had lived previously.

Today's Co-ordination

After saying that Wilmington was 'perhaps 25% effective in public health matters eight years ago, Thibau described today's conditions as being 'about 85%', with co-ordination with other departments helping to maintain this standard.

The town now has a good sanitary code, which, if enforced helps to 'build things up'. Many of the old buildings have been improved, or torn down, and still other things are planned, and, he hoped, would show in next year's public health budget.

Thibau mentioned the need of

The state Department of Public Health, he said, is not a 'Supra-Agency' but serves more in an advisory capacity, and provides certain special services to the towns and cities of the Commonwealth.

The State Department of Health, and the four Health Districts into which the state is divided, depend on the local Boards of Health, and on the local Public Health officer.

'I cannot see' he said, 'how a community of this size could possibly fill its obligations in public health, to its people, without people of competence, such as Pat Thibau'.

GUS WALKER SPEAKING

Chairman Gus Walker, of the Wilmington Board of Health, speaking at the Health Forum at the Baldwin Club, Tuesday night. Others in the panel are Irving Pfau, Board of Health; Harold Rose, State Department of Public Health, Herbert Nickerson, State Department of Public Health, and former Wilmington Public Health Officer Patrick Thibau.

At the end of the table is Frank McLean, Chairman of the Association.

a trained sanitarian to carry on the plans - for drainage of swamps, to help in the Well Children conferences, to carry on the biological, engineering and sanitary work of the town.

Unobtrusive

Harold Rose, a Sanitary Engineer for the State Department of Health, was the first to speak.

In describing Public Health he told the audience that it was something that was 'very unobtrusive' when it worked well.

One of 12

Chairman Gus Walker of the Board of Health, described the dispositions of the board for the 'emergency period' between Thibau and his successor.

Mr Le Blanc, he said, is Acting Agent who will handle the complaints, and do a lot of messenger work. He described LeBlanc as very reliable, but added that the board has no intentions of replacing Thibau with LeBlanc.

Part of the emergency concerns a possible let-up in the standards of new homes, because of the lack of inspections. Robert Meserve, of Chase Road, No. Wilmington, a professional engineer with a Boston firm, has been retained to make Saturday inspections of certain phases of public health in connection with home building. An out of town Sanitarian will take care of other phases, including laboratory work, also on Saturdays.

School sewage systems, and systems in public buildings will be handled by Mr Nickerson, who has volunteered his services.

Doctor Fagan will continue as the Medical Officer, and Simon Cutter will continue as legal counsel, a service that Walker described as extremely effective.

Finances

In the question period which followed the presentation the question of finances was mentioned.

Walker expressed the hope that there would be sufficient funds, without having to ask for more, but he could not be certain, and wanted to ask the Town Manager, or Selectman John Brooks, both of whom were present, if they had any ideas on the subject.

Brooks agreed that the public health program, as carried out in Wilmington, was very important, but dodged, to a degree, any question on finances saying 'we'll cross that bridge when we get to it'.

Ethics

Questions by Chairman Frank McLean and Atty Roland Wood to Mr Thibau touched on the 'Conflict of Interest' question.

They wanted to know if Thibau had ever done any work for any of the firms coming into Wilmington, on which he would have to pass later, as a Sanitarian.

Thibau said he had helped design the sewerage systems for the new police station and for the new highway garage, and had offered to do plans for the Permanent Building Committee.

Walker explained that, as an advisor to the Board of Health the Board did not feel it ethical that Mr Thibau should also prepare plans on which he would advise.

Thibau, asked again by Wood, said that on one occasion he had drawn up plans for a private industry because 'I felt it was for the benefit of the town to get industry in town'.

Wood: Isn't this a conflict of interest?

Thibau: Definitely.

SCHOOL BUDGET UP $120,000

Wilmington's school budget, completed last week, for the year 1962, is $120,294.79 over that of the year 1961.

In a public statement the School board has released its reasons for the increase.

Full time salaries of 12 new teachers, started this year, will increase the budget $53,200.04.

Eleven new teaching positions expected in the September-December pay period of 1962, at an average salary of $4600, will cost $18,880.02. The new in 1959, and revised in 1961 will cost $10,000.50.

Under the new schedules a teacher with a Bachelor's degree starts at $4200, with 15 yearly increments of $200. The School Department adopted this schedule, instead of a 10 year increment-program because it felt that it would hold the teachers in Wilmington who are near the maximum in the existing schedule, and (2) will encourage experienced teachers to seek positions in Wilmington and (3) will spare the town a substantial increase in Increased cost of textbooks, supplies and instructional aids will cost $7,482.56.

A new chemistry room in the high school, and other projects in Foreign Languages and Mathematics, via the National Defense Education Act, will cost $9,000, of which $4500 will be returned to the town.

New improved library services at the elementary level, including more basic reference books, fiction and non-fiction books will cost $1,361.20. Two new part-time clerks, one for the high school, and one for the new Salem Street school will cost $1,200.00.

Increases in pay for central office personnel, including school physicians, nurses, the superintendent of schools and his secretary, will cost $2,015.67.

Increases in capital outlay expenditures will cost $1,688.

Lights, water, and other services for the new school will cost $1,400.00.

Miscellaneous costs, including the evening school, taxis, athletic transportation, health supplies, and Channel 2. WGBH, Boston, $2,015.60.

WILMINGTON'S HEALTH

Selectman Brooks spoke up to say that Pat was asked to draw the plan because none had been presented, and the Town Manager then spoke up to say that it was he who asked Thibeau to draw the plans, on his own time, not town time - 'and that's what he did. I didn't see a conflict of interest, if you could get an industry in that way which would mean almost a dollar on the tax rate.'

Woods wanted to know who would inspect the plans, in such a case, and he was told that Thibeau wouldn't do the constructing, but rather he would inspect the work, to make sure it came up to his specifications.

Brooks pointed out that (as McLean had earlier pointed out), in cases of the town's own buildings it would be an economy to have the town sanitarian design the plans, as he would have to work on them anyway.

The discussion ended with two statements, one by Thibeau and one by Walker.

Thibeau: 'In justice to Mr. Lancaster this was the only time the question arose.'

Walker: The board (of health -Ed.) recognizes clearly that there is a conflict of interest, and that at times it is necessary to walk on the brink of disaster.'

YEAR PROBATION TO CHELMSFORD MAN

Harold Henkel, a resident of Chelmsford, was placed on probation for a year, by Justice William Henchey of Woburn District Court, on Nov. 17th., after pleading guilty to a charge of indecent exposure. He was arrested on Nov 10th by Officer John Ritchie.

Anthony De Luca, supervising principal in the Wilmington Public Schools, was elected by the School Committee, on Nov. 29th to be Principal of the new Salem Street School, now under construction.

A teacher in the Wilmington schools for the past eight years, he has been a supervising principal for the past three.

Mr De Luca will begin his duties in part next January, in planning for the operation of the school, and on July 1 will be assigned to the school on a full time basis, prior to its opening next September.

The contractors are reported to be well ahead of schedule, so that no delay is anticipated.

De Luca lives at 70 Federal Street, in a home he built three years ago, and has been very active in community affairs since moving to Wilmington from his native city of Woburn.

DEATH OF WILLIAM J. LAUTZ, ENGINEER

A Solemn High Mass of Requiem was celebrated Tuesday morning at 10 am in St. Thomas Church for William J. Lautz, 38 year old Mechanical Engineer, who died last Saturday, in the Mt. Auburn Hospital, after a valiant effort on the part of relatives and friends to prevent his death.

Mr. Lautz had gone to the hospital on Nov. 29th., his 38th birthday, for an operation, and suddenly developed a heart condition, from which he died three days later in spite of many blood transfusions. A graduate of Worcester Poly-technical School, he was born in Torrington Connecticut, and had been a resident of Wakefield, before moving here 7 years ago.

Mr. Lautz was an engineer at the National Company, in Malden, where he was in charge of 200 men, in the designing and manufacture of radio equipment. He was a member of the American Association of Tool Engineers.

The celebrant at the Mass was the Rev. John Regan of Manchester, Connecticut, a cousin to Mr Lautz; Rev. Paul Berube served as Deacon, and Rev. Francis Mackin as Sub-deacon. Pall bearers were business associates of Mr. Lautz, Robert Clarke, Joseph Quick, James Bowler, John Conway, John Edfors and Jack Kavanaugh.

The son of Robert W. and Harriet L. (Smith) Lautz, and brother of David R. Lautz and Mrs. Mary R. Kvaka, all of Torrington Connecticut, Mr. Lautz is survived by his wife, Lois M. (Hamilton) Lautz, and four children, Donna Marie, Karen Ruth, Leanne and Robert William, all of 7 Kelley Road, Wilmington.

Funeral arrangements were in charge of the W. S. Cavanaugh & Son Funeral Home.
